Think about submitting your graduate research to Human Welfare!

Based at Green Templeton College, University of Oxford, Human Welfare: An International Journal of Graduate Research is a multidisciplinary journal that aims to publish the very best graduate research investigating human welfare issues with real-world ramifications.

Human Welfare accepts submissions from graduate students (i.e., masters and doctorate students) in ANY discipline and at any stage of their research. While submissions related to this year's HWC theme are welcome, we also welcome ANY article related to "human welfare" in general.

Students who have completed a graduate program within the previous 12 months may also submit a manuscript that is based on their graduate research.

All articles in Human Welfare are peer-reviewed and completely open access.

We are also happy to announce The Ngo Human Welfare Prize, which will be awarded annually to a written piece annually, with a certificate and £600 for the author(s). If no suitable entry is identified in any one year, then the prize would be awarded in the subsequent year.

See our website for more details about submissions and the NGO Human Welfare Prize.

Email your submission by 7 December 2012 for online early access, or by 3 February 2013 for eligibility for the second volume (May 2013): hwjournal@gtc.ox.ac.uk
